Student Gambling Ring Exposed

A Bryant senior was arrested last week and accused of being the mastermind of a large-scale gambling ring centered at both Bryant and the University of Rhode Island. Five Bryant basketball players have been linked to the operation.

Matthew Zimmerman, 21, a senior finance major, was arrested last Wednesday by undercover state police officers in the parking lot of the McDonald's at Lincoln Mall.

According to police, Zimmerman was there to observe a meeting between "an operative of Zimmerman" and an undercover state trooper posing as a relative to discuss the gambling debt of Scott Kent, a former URI football player and brother of current URI basketball player, Jeff Kent.

Zimmerman was charged with two counts of extortion, and one charge each of bookmaking, possession of marijuana, racketeering, organized crime gambling, and conspiracy. He pleaded innocent and was released on a $5,000 surety bond.

Basketball Team Implicated

According to state police, five members of the Bryant basketball team have been involved in the gambling operation and owe Zimmerman $54,000 in illegal sports bets.

State Police Detective Commander, Capt. Brian Andrews, named basketball players Christopher "C.J." Simmons, a senior from Wall, NJ, and David Burrows, a sophomore from Milton, NH, as two of the five members involved. State Police have refused to identify the other three players involved.

According to Andrews, several members of the basketball team distributed football betting cards for Zimmerman throughout the campus.

Sports bets by members of the team included a $10,000, two-game college basketball parlay by five members of the team on February 15, and two $2,000 bets on college basketball games by two different players on another night.

Andrews stated, "The investigation is moving along. We are trying to identify all those involved and determine the role each played in the operation."

Task Force Announced

In response to the exposure of the gambling ring, Bryant College announced Saturday the formation of a task force to study the problem of illegal gambling on the campus.

At a press conference held Saturday, Dr. Walter B. Roettger, Executive Vice President/Provost, stated, "Bryant College is deeply distressed and saddened by the allegations of illegal gambling involving students. We are doing everything we can to address this situation."

Roettger announced the formation of a six member task force headed by Dr. William T. O'Hara, President Emeritus of the college.

O'Hara stated he was "delighted to be able to say yes to that invitation. In my 13 years here I have generated... strong loyalties to the institution, and confidence not only in the institution itself, but in the student body."

O'Hara, who holds law degrees from Georgetown and New York Universities, served as Bryant's president for 13 years, and recently chaired Governor Sundlun's Ethics Task Force. He is a former member of the NCAA Presidents' Commission and is currently the executive director of Bryant's Institute for Family Enterprise.

The other members of the Task Force were announced at a press conference on Tuesday.

They include Dr. William P. Haas, a current Professor of Humanities at Bryant, specializing in the field of business ethics, Bernard A. Jackvony, '67, a partner at Tillinghast, Collins & Graham, Dr. Kristen Kennedy, Associate Professor of Mathematics and Women's Golf Coach, Bernard G. Mondor, '91H, Chairman of the Pawtucket Red Sox Baseball club, and Walter C. Tillinghast, '53, '88H, the retired president of Spaulding Co. and former Bryant trustee.

O'Hara's task force will report on the "scope of gambling problems in general and, in particular, within our athletic programs," according to current President William E. Trueheart.

6% Tuition Increase Lowest in Six Years

Lisa Lucchesi
Archway Staff Writer

A 6% tax increase in tuition, and room and board rates for the 1992-1993 academic year, proposed by the Board of Trustees, was released Tuesday night.

Dr. Walter Roettger, executive Vice President/Provost, presented to the Student Presidents Advisory Council tuition figures similar to the one he presented to the Board of Trustees. He used overheads to show the rationale of why tuition figures should be increased.

According to Roettger, "From [the college's] perspective, the increases were necessary in order to move us along the objectives" that Bryant is trying to reach. He continues, "High quality will allow us to make the investments we're going to need, and at the same time make Bryant a good academic value."

The cost of tuition was increased from $10,992 to $11,653. The cost of living in dorms 1-13 will cost $3,246, an increase of 10% from the current price of $2,951. Freshman dorms 14 and 15 will cost $3,538, an increase of 1% from the current price of $3,503. Dorm 16 will cost $3,660 an increase of

Bryant Catches Up With Competitors

Bryant College announced a 6-percent increase in the tuition rate for the 1992-1993 academic year this week. The single-digit increase comes after six consecutive years of double-digit increases. Costs for room and board will increase approximately 4.5-percent, according to the College.

Fontanella, Gross Win Senate Executive Council Race

Lisa Lucchesi
Archway Staff Writer

The Student Senate Executive Council election results were announced at yesterday's Senate meeting.

Freshman Rob Fontanella won the presidential contest over Mike Yaffe. Tara Gross won in an unopposed race for Vice President.

Fontanella claimed to be "concerned that he was a freshman." But he said, "I don't think class denomination can affect my leadership abilities."

Jennie Lynn Rice won the seat of treasurer over Doug Tucker. Janine Weisberg won the race for treasurer over freshman write-in candidate

Mary Gates.

A total of 720 votes were cast. However, Senate president, Jamie Bergeron would not release the results in accordance with last week's motion to prohibit the release of numbers and percentages.

The newly elected executive board officers will officially take office on March 25.

Archway Poll: Students Want Election Results Released

Kelly A. Cartwright
Archway Staff Writer

In an informal survey conducted Tuesday night, an overwhelming majority of students said that the Student Senate should release the tabulated or percentage results of Senate elections.

The survey, which was conducted outside both Salmanson and South Dining Halls during the 5-6:30 pm "dinner hour," was offered as an opportunity for students to voice their opinions on the Senate's recent decision to withhold election information.

Out of 358 people surveyed Tuesday night, 262 people said, "Yes" the senate should release election results. Ninety-six students said the Senate should not.

On the survey slip, students were asked indicate a yes or no response, their sex, and their year of graduation. Because some students did not complete the sex or year of graduation sections, the vote totals have not been broken down as planned.

The Archway conducted this poll of a sample of Bryant's population to see if individual student's opinions matched those of their representing senators.

As was reported in last week's Archway, of the twenty-two senators who cast their votes on the motion during the meeting, 15 senators said that the senate should not release vote tabulations. One senator voiced a dissenting opinion. Six senators abstained from the vote.

Open Communication Will Demonstrate Pursuit of a Solution

Since the story about the college gambling ring broke last Thursday, there has been a lot of concern voiced over the administration's response. Around campus more than one voice has been heard saying, "Where's the administration?" To many it seems that the administration was slow to respond to the news.

The media has asked, "How do you think this issue will affect the school's reputation?" Bryant students have wondered the same thing. Will the fact that a few Bryant students have been implicated in this societal no-no reflect poorly on other students and the institution?

There are several points students have raised to explain their concerns. Some people feel the school's name is being dragged through the mud by the press. Will this affect the school's reputation in terms of new admissions or value of conferred degrees?

Student concerns were accentuated when University of Rhode Island President Robert L. Carothers held a press conference just hours after the story broke on Thursday.

However, Bryant did not appear to offer a solid response until Saturday. When announcing the formation of the task force on Saturday, it was also announced that Bryant's president was on his way back to campus from a seminar in Aspen, Colorado.

To many, this explained Bryant's slow response. How could statements regarding Bryant's position be made without the presence of the college's leader?

While concerns about the slow reaction are valid, it should be noted that the college has a responsibility to protect confidential information. Furthermore, college officials must take extreme care not to interfere with the criminal investigation of the crisis.

However, the administration must maintain open communication with the external community to let them know the college isn't just hiding with its tail between its legs. Quicker response might better demonstrate the college's active pursuit of a solution.

Community Supports Release of Senate Election Results

The Student Senate and Senate Executive elections were held today and unfortunately I did not vote. I refrained from voting not because I couldn't find where to cast a ballot or because I didn't have the time. I didn't vote because I simply abstained from exercising my privilege. Usually I am the type of person who frowns at people for not participating in our democracy but, this situation is different. I had a very real reason for not voting and it was realized at last week's Senate meeting. After attending this meeting it became very clear to me that it is this democratic body that isn't participating in our democracy the way it was designed to. At this meeting I saw that the Senators are for the Senators and not for the students. I saw a body operating as individuals and not as a group striving for what is best for who they represent (or claim to represent).

At this meeting, after a lengthy discussion, the Senate voted to pass a motion to prohibit the release of percentages related to election results. Although I disagree wholeheartedly with the Senate, that is not the issue. The issue is that the Senators missed the boat. They completely ignored the arguments by the students at the meeting — those students who they claim to represent. I cringed at the statement of one Senator when she exclaimed that they represent the people and ask for the student's opinions on certain topics. Quite frankly I have never seen this or even heard of this and quite frankly I do not believe it. Another Senator argued that this is not the real world and thus highly sensitive information, like in this case, should not be released. As this school and campus is the students' lives I ask that Senator how the lives of over two thousand students is not representative of the real world.

No, I didn't vote today and I am very angry that I did not. Until the Senators pull their heads out from their back sides (ahem!) then the structure that is in place and the structure that the students voted for will never be representative of the students' voice. When, and only when, the Senators begin to listen as a group rather than hold strong opinions as individuals, the structure that we put in place will be representative of what we, the students, feel. And only then will I vote again.

Gary Casagrande

Dear Editor:

I find the results of last week's vote by the Student Senate regarding the election results to be shocking. Out of the 24 people on the student senate; 22 were present and the resulting vote to withhold election results was: 15 Yea, 1 Nay, 6 Abstained. What is going on here? This is just another election. Why should this election be any different from other elections? Student Senator elections are on the 23rd and 24th, are those results going to be withheld too? We hear election results from presidential elections as well as when we vote for Governors, Senators, Congressmen, and even Mayors. If government election results are not withheld from the public why should these elections be? I find this to be a very confusing issue? My feelings on this issue are clear. Release the election results!!!! We have a right to know!

James Egan

Editor's Note: The senate resolution was to withhold the election results for both the Executive Council and Legislative elections.

Archway Editor:

Congratulations to the Student Senate at Bryant College. In what proves to be yet another example of legislative authority at its worst, the fine members of this assembly have decided that public information is ultimately private information.

It is, of course, noble to keep in mind that, generally, any information which deals with candidates will hurt someone. The issue becomes, then, should the candidates receive protection, or the electorate, from the dangers of disseminating information? Are there real dangers in having an uninformed electorate? Certainly, we would not expect our mature justice system to permit House and Senate votes on the floor to be kept in silence, and still, allowing such information to enter re-election campaigns does sometimes "hurt" the incumbent's chances of retaining her/his seat. (It might even hurt their feelings!). The candidate accepts the risk and dangers associated with running for office. The electorate should not be forced to accept the dangers that come from ignorance.

The only true question is whether the Senate should have the right to even debate potential restrictions of basic human rights. So, Bryant student Senators, BRAVO, for giving us this shining example of what's wrong with overbearing legislative authority. Bryant College is truly a microcosm of the real world.

Sincerely,
Brian K. Lebeau

Senator Responds to Poll

To the Editor:

The recent decision on behalf of the Student Senate not to release vote counts in Senate elections seems to be of great concern to the staff of The Archway.

As a senator, I realize that this is understandable, for much thought and deliberation went into the decisions of each and every senator on this issue. Your survey, in an attempt to gain more support for your position, was an excellent idea.

The question posed, however, "Should the Student Senate release election results?" was ambiguous and misleading. Released to whom? To the candidates? To the Senate? To The Archway? What results? Who won? Vote percentages? Actual vote tallies? The Student Senate does release election results. Anyone and everyone is invited to the regular meetings (Wednesdays at 4:00 in Papitto Dining Room) to hear the results on any issue and a list of the winning candidates is released to The Archway. The results of the survey taken cannot be considered an accurate measure of the opinion of the Bryant community.

Support for Task Force

As a student body it is necessary to unite as a community and address the issues that come before us. The recent uncoverings indicate that several members of our community have been involved with a tremendous amount of sports gambling. First, although sports gambling in Rhode Island is illegal, we must understand that there are individuals involved who may need help. For many, gambling is a hobby or recreational activity. But, more importantly, for some, gambling is a serious problem and sickness. This letter is intended to extend support to those people who may have a possible addiction to gambling or those who may feel tendencies toward compulsive gambling. Bryant is compiling a Task Force consisting of friends, faculty members, or staff for you to ask for help or just to talk to. The Bryant community encourages students to utilize these avenues in order to realize that there IS support for this problem. Second, as members of the Bryant community, we must also understand that we cannot tolerate bookies/bookmakers on our campus. It is these few individuals who are the downfall of those students in need of help. Also, due to the actions of one individual, we as students suffer from a temporary stain on our college's reputation. Don't allow this to continue! Let's support this Task Force on Campus Gambling in order to correct the gambling problem that surrounds our students. All students are encouraged and welcomed to contribute to this process. Therefore, the more support we extend to this Task Force the more quickly we can wash this stain out of our reputation and focus on maintaining our reputation as one of the best business schools in the country.

Sincerely,
James P. Bergeron

Trueheart Calls For Aid to Task Force

Dear Bryant Students:

I am deeply saddened by the allegations that some Bryant students have become involved in illegal gambling activities. If the allegations prove true, I am concerned that those involved, their friends, and their families may be suffering considerable financial loss and psychological pain.

In recent discussions, I have become more aware of student attitudes towards sports gambling. Our education programs warning of the dangers of gambling, notwithstanding, it is now clear to me that even more communication and understanding need to be achieved throughout the campus. It is not sufficient to hear that Bryant's incidence of gambling is "no worse" than at other campuses. We must respond with caring and purposefulness to aid those who have gambling problems and to eliminate the conditions under which those problems can develop.

As you may know, a Task Force on Illegal Gambling has been appointed and President Emeritus, Dr. William T. O'Hara will serve as chairman. The essential task force charge is to do fact finding, to examine the effectiveness of existing gambling educational programs and support systems, and to develop recommendations for enhancing our ability to identify nascent problems and prevent them in the future.

The task force does not have a disciplinary responsibility or role. It's sole purpose is to seek information from students, faculty, staff, and external experts to help us better understand the nature of the problem.

This is where I need your help. During your years at Bryant, our faculty and staff have sought to teach you invaluable lessons for your present and future life. Now we turn the tables, and ask you to teach us. Through this task force, we hope to learn from you information that will help us respond to the presence and problems of gambling activity at Bryant.

There are a number of ways in which you can participate in this important effort. If you would like to meet in confidence with the task force, you can do so by writing to any member of the task force care of Dr. William O'Hara, Box A, Bryant College. If you wish total anonymity, your valued comments can still be communicated in several ways. Starting on Wednesday, March 4th, the following toll-free number will be available to permit you to call in comments to a task force member: 800-232-3077. You may call between 3 p.m. and 7 p.m. Monday through Thursday. In addition, a comment box is available at the circulation desk in the library. I urge you to sincerely consider communicating with the task force in one of the above ways and please consider meeting with a member of the group if you prefer.

Finally, I wish to reiterate my concern for those — if the allegations are true — whose gambling activity has resulted in personal suffering. Remember that there are many caring individuals among our faculty, and staff who would be interested in talking to you confidentially. In addition, consider using the services offered by the fine professional staff in the Counseling Center. And above all, I encourage you to discuss your concerns with your family.

My confidence in the Bryant Community's ability to constructively confront this problem remains unshaken. Through the efforts of all of us, we will not only help those who need immediate assistance, but we will also work together to discover ways to make Bryant a richer learning and living community.

Sincerely,
William E. Trueheart

Altered Identification

Wednesday, February 26, at 12:45am, a Public Safety Officer noticed a motor vehicle parked in a reserved parking spot at the Country Comfort (CC). As the officer approached the vehicle, three males exited the car and entered the CC. Seeing the vehicle had a handicapped pass and no authorization to park in a reserved spot, the officer entered the CC to locate the driver. At this time, he contacted the dispatcher and requested a plate check on the vehicle to determine the owner's name. From the plate check, the officer learned the vehicle owner was twenty years old and not of legal drinking age.

Inside the CC, the individual checking identification (ID) stated the three males had produced IDs showing they were of legal drinking age. The officer located the driver of the vehicle on the second floor of the CC and questioned him on how he gained entrance to the CC. The male stated he used his driver's license. The officer then asked if the birth date on the license was correct. The male claimed it was, but later admitted he had tampered with the license when the officer contacted dispatch to verify the information. The license was confiscated and the underage male was asked to leave the CC. A report was initiated by the Department of Public Safety and forwarded to the appropriate offices.

Breaking and Entering

At 2:45am on Wednesday, February 26, Public Safety received a report that two individuals had broken into a townhouse and attempted to steal food. A resident of the townhouse, who heard noise, claimed to have investigated the situation and found two people rummaging in the kitchen area with all of the lights off.

At this time, two males exited the kitchen. The resident grabbed one, while the other escaped through the rear door. In an attempt to awake others, the resident lost his hold on the second prowler, who escaped through the front door. A second resident witnessed both intruders entering another townhouse.

The responding officer obtained all necessary information from witnesses and requested the Resident Director (RD) on duty. One of the witnesses requested the involvement of the Smithfield Police Department, after being advised on possible solutions.

One suspect was identified using the Freshmen Register of 1989. With the presence of a Smithfield Police Officer and the RD on duty, Public Safety entered the suspects townhouse. The suspect, who was confirmed as being one of the intruders by a witness, was found in bed. He confessed to the allegations and gave the name of his accomplice. The residents of the broken-in townhouse decided not to have the intruders arrested, but be given a strong warning by the Smithfield Police Department and the Department of Public Safety.

Confiscated Drug Paraphernalia

On Wednesday, February 26, at 7:35am, Public Safety responded to a Fire Alarm in the townhouses. During an investigation to determine the cause of the alarm, two Public Safety officers discovered a bong in a bedroom. The alarm was reset and the Smithfield Police Department was contacted. Upon arrival, a Smithfield Police Officer confiscated the bong and obtained the names of the residents of that room.

History Major to be Implemented Next Year

Kelly A. Cartwright
Archway Staff Writer

Because the Bryant College History Department believes that, "Understanding human identity and social interaction in their historical contexts [is] so necessary to analyze and evaluate issues of the contemporary world," the department has planned a history major to be implemented next year.

The history concentration is one of four liberal arts concentrations approved by the Board of Trustees to begin next fall. All four liberal arts concentrations—history, international studies, economics, and English—will lead to a Bachelor of Arts degree. The degree program will be available to current freshmen and sophomores.

Why would a history major be offered at a business school like Bryant? Professor Michael Hobart, chair of the History Department, explained, "We have a very strong history faculty" which has recently grown from four full-time professors to seven. These people are not just history teachers, but are "scholars who are publishing in American and other histories, who have excellent teaching experience," said Hobart.

According to the concentration's committee, which includes all members of the full time history faculty, "Historical thinking provides us the intellectual tools and sophistication to face a rapidly changing and challenging future with measured confidence."

With this as the rationale for the importance of studying history, the department feels, "Each student acquires skills enabling her or him to read documents and texts in their historical setting, to interpret events and understand institutions, to appreciate the diverse cultural and historical experience of western and non-western peoples, and to write extensively."

The committee further explains that these skills, coupled with Bryant's common body of business knowledge, can provide students with a unique education and training.

Five Hoopsters Implicated in Gambling Ring

Cindy Gale and Mark Plihcik
Archway Staff Writers

Four Bryant basketball team members have been suspended indefinitely from the team as a result of allegations they were involved in the sports gambling ring uncovered last week. A fifth player, also involved, was dropped from the team last month for "disciplinary reasons."

According to Jack Oldham, Associate Vice President of External Relations, senior Christopher J. "C.J." Simmons was dismissed last month for "unrelated discipline problems" stemming from violations of team policy.

Sophomore David Burrows was suspended indefinitely on Monday for his alleged participation in the gambling ring, which police say was masterminded by senior Matthew Zimmerman.

Zimmerman has pleaded innocent to two counts of extortion and one count each of bookmaking, possession of marijuana, racketeering, organized crime gambling, and conspiracy.

Three other players, who college officials refused to name, were also suspended from the team on Monday, pending further investigation.

"At this point, since the case has not been resolved, I cannot comment on that [the identity of the three players]," said William E. Trueheart, president, at a press conference held on Tuesday.

The players involved are alleged to have accumulated a $54,000 gambling debt to Zimmerman. According to Captain Brian Andrews of the State Police, the $54,000 included a one time bet of $10,000 made by the

according to Oldham, was a "stern but constructive message," made out of "concern, not based on generic information."

Reilly refused to comment on the letter at the advice of college administrators.

A source close to the Athletic Department stated that gambling by players was "common knowledge," but wasn't talked about. The source also indicated that the more the players' debt grew, the five players on February 15.

One of the players involved acted as a bookmaker for the other four, placing bets with Zimmerman.

As the debt grew, Zimmerman refused to take any more bets and held the first player responsible for the entire debt. This player then went to Zimmerman and agreed to take responsibility for the debt and work for Zimmerman to pay it off.

Rumors of gambling on campus caused the Athletic Department to take the precaution of sending a letter to the parents of men's basketball team members, warning them of the potential ramifications of an athlete becoming involved in gambling.

Head coach Ed Reilly sent the letter, dated January 2, 1992, stating gambling is a team violation and emphasizing the importance of counseling on the matter.

The letter did not, however, name specific allegations or students, but less it was discussed. However, the source was quick to point out the entire team was not involved in gambling.

When asked if the gambling pressures had affected the team's performance, the source remarked, "Since it was a small part of the team [that was involved] it didn't have a significant effect on the games. It didn't help, but it didn't hurt."

Trueheart stated the NCAA had been contacted concerning the alleged gambling activities. According to NCAA regulations, betting on college basketball games is a violation which could result in the loss of eligibility for players.

Dr. William T. O'Hara, President Emeritus and Chairman of the college's newly formed Task Force on Gambling, said he was confident that the college had taken "positive actions," following the uncovering of the gambling ring, and it is unlikely that the school will face NCAA sanctions.

Basketball team members were implicated in the scandal when an undercover Rhode Island State Trooper was scheduled to meet Zimmerman in the McDonalds restaurant at Lincoln Mall. The trooper was there to discuss a $7,000 gambling debt owed to Zimmerman by former URI football player, Scott Kent.

A Bryant player, later identified as Simmons, met with the trooper. It was discovered the car Simmons drove belonged to David Burrows.

The linking of Simmons to the gambling ring brought questions of Bryant players betting on their own team.

In an interview on WPRI-TV Channel 12 last Friday, senior Bridgett Casey, a member of the women's basketball team, dismissed the allegations of Bryant players betting on their own team as unlikely.

"I've heard rumors that they have been gambling on other teams," Casey said, "but as to their own team, I don't think they could do it. Given a record of 3-22, I don't think they would do it."

The entire gambling ring was exposed when two female friends of Kent went to the State Police, fearing for the safety of Kent. Kent was allegedly being extorted by Zimmerman for the payment of his debt.

State Police then set up the sting operation last week at McDonalds and arrested Zimmerman and his roommate, 20-year-old Dennis Millette, Jr. in connection with the ring.

Kent's involvement with Zimmerman led to allegations that URI basketball players, including Kent's brother, starting center Jeff Kent, had been involved in point shaving and gambling.

Both Kents deny Jeff had any involvement in gambling activities at URI.

According to a report in the February 29 Providence Journal, Scott Kent said, "My brother doesn't deserve this. That's the last thing I ever wanted. He's the most honest, truthful kid you've ever met in your life."

"He's done too much for URI, had too great a career, to see it end like this," added Kent.

However, allegations of Jeff Kent's involvement in point shaving date back to early last month.

According to an article in the February 11 issue of The Good Five Cent Cigar, URI's daily paper, fraternity members at URI alleged that Jeff Kent had thrown the URI-UMass basketball game.

Students at URI doubt the URI Rams are involved in the scandal.

Anita Couture a URI senior, said in an February 29 interview with the Providence Journal, "I think it's just the fact that Jeff Kent's brother is involved that they're trying to get the basketball team."

In an interview with Scott Kent on WJAR-TV Channel 10's six o'clock news report on Monday evening, Kent called the entire scandal "ludicrous." He also claimed he was not a bookmaker as police allege.

Instead, he said, he and his friends "all bet on games. We would sit around somebody's living room, and make the bets, then I would call them in."

At this time, the police investigation has not uncovered any link to URI basketball players.

Gambling Ring Broken, Bryant Student Arrested

This story compiled by Archway Staff Writers Michael J. Boyd, Kelly A. Cartwright, Cindy Gale, and Mark Plihcik.

The task force will not be "a disciplinary process" but is intended to measure the scope and effect of current support systems on campus. A report is expected by April 15.

Zimmerman's Involvement

The investigation into Zimmerman's activities was reportedly started by college officials after a freshman's parents paid off the student's $7,500 gambling debt and informed the college of the gambling incident when they withdrew the student from school.

According to the college, information about the gambling operation was forwarded to Smithfield police, who in turn contacted the state police.

Police have said Zimmerman was involved in gambling on both college and professional football and basketball games since at least the fall 1990 semester. Bookmakers working for Zimmerman were accepting wagers for illegal numbers games, according to police. Police added they are uncertain if Zimmerman profited or organized the numbers bets.

Zimmerman was allegedly removed from his on-campus housing during the fall semester for unknown reasons.

Zimmerman then rented an apartment at 400 North Main Street and a fake storefront at 888 Branch Avenue, both in Providence, with Dennis Millette, Jr.

Millette, 20, was arrested with Detective Commander Capt. Brian Andrews speaks to members of the PC Friars about gambling earlier this week.

Copies of the Sports Log were among the evidence seized in Zimmerman's apartment.

Zimmerman last Wednesday and charged with organized criminal gambling and conspiracy and released on $10,000 personal recognizance.

A neighbor of Zimmerman's at his storefront business, 888 Branch Avenue, said Zimmerman and Millette seemed like "normal college kids." The neighbor thought the two were running a telemarketing service or insurance business. Zimmerman and Millette had been renting the storefront for approximately eight months according to the neighbor.

He also added the two were at the store every other day, mostly in the evening, for only 30 to 40 minutes. There was no suspicious activities reported, but they did note they showed up in "sporty cars with tinted windows."

A police search of the fake storefront, rented under a phony name, and Zimmerman's apartment turned up photos of John Gotti, the reputed New York City crime boss, and a number of books about organized crime including one entitled How to Beat the Mob.

In addition, police recovered betting slips, a laptop computer, disks containing gambling records, cash, sports slips, express mail envelopes, and copies of the Sports Log, an over-the-counter sports schedule.

According to police, Zimmerman used the storefront for his operations. Associated bookmakers would dial an 800-number which would ring at the storefront. Bets were allegedly passed to Zimmerman, who used the alias "Derrick," through the 800-number.

The URI Connection

Although the gambling operation was centered at Bryant and URI, police assert the operation extended elsewhere. Information obtained in their investigation indicates the gambling extended to colleges in Massachusetts, North Carolina, Alabama, and California. The out-of-state gambling operations were handled through the use of Federal Express.

The gambling operation was exposed when state police obtained information about an alleged bookmaker being shaken down by a "known organized crime person."

After being threatened by the organized crime figure, the alleged bookmaker, identified by Andrews as Scott Kent, and two female friends contacted Narragansett and state police.

Last Wednesday, an undercover state trooper posed as Kent's relative and met with an associate of Zimmerman at McDonald's in Lincoln. State police later identified Simmons as the person who met with the trooper. New Hampshire license plates on the car he left in were traced to Bryant and Burrows.

On Tuesday, WJAR-TV, Channel 10, reported Zimmerman named Edward Mulligan Romano, a member of the Patriarca crime family as an associate in the gambling ring. State police declined to comment on the allegation.

When asked about the mafia involvement, Captain Andrews stated he knew nothing about the allegations except what he had heard on the news, and therefore, could not confirm the accusation.

Action Taken by Bryant

College officials expelled Zimmerman on Friday.

According to published reports in the Providence Journal, Dean of Student Life F.J. Talley noted Zimmerman was expelled because of a "repetition of poor behavior that he had been warned not to repeat."

Gambling...When Is It a Problem?

by Bill Phillips
Director of Bryant College
Counseling Services

"Gambling." Definitely the word of the week. TV cameras all over the place. Reporters stopping students for comments. Headlines. Some students in trouble. News to some, old news for others.

Let's change the focus for a few minutes. Back off from the media blitz, the allegations, and the big dollar amounts. Instead, think in terms of people-friends, acquaintances, students who have been named, students who will never be named.

We have a bit of an age-old dilemma here. There are many problems in the "real world" that we recognize on an intellectual level. We can intelligently discuss the existence of alcohol abuse, suicide, date rape, or problem gambling. The more difficult task is to recognize these problems when they strike close to us, either in our own lives or the lives of those important to us.

The gambling incident brings this particular issue to our doorstep now. How do you view it? Can it be an addiction? Is it simply nothing more than a few individuals getting out of hand with what is essentially a safe, fun activity? Does the illegal nature of sports betting make a difference to you, so that you distinguish it from legal forms?

In my role of counselor, I try to keep a perspective that focuses on the behavior and how it impacts on the important dimensions of a person's life. I look at a person's gambling, and I ask questions such as:

Does it hurt relationships important to the individual?

Does it make it easy to neglect important responsibilities?

Does it occupy too large a piece of this person's thoughts?

Is gambling for fun these days? It always starts that way, but what about now?

Does the individual lie about his/her gambling?

Have financial difficulties arisen? Are grades affected?

Would the individual like to gamble less or stop?

Is his/her life better or worse because of gambling?

It's a simple, common-sense approach. No one needs to perform a psychiatric evaluation for addiction. No one need debate the issue of disease vs. controllable behavior. It's a matter of simply looking in the mirror, or at that friend, with one critical question—Is gambling harming me?

From the experience of counseling, I know that individuals with problems are often the last to recognize those problems. Defense mechanisms can be very effective in shielding a person from the truth. usually it takes a caring friend to break through, to confront the behavior and say "Look, I think this is getting out of hand. You should get some help...I'll go with you if it helps."

Perhaps the attention drawn to gambling on campus will at least have us pause a moment to think of those we know who gamble. Perhaps in a few cases individuals will reach out to other individuals who they think are in need. That would be nice.

Why Do Students Gamble?

by Patrick McGloin
and Greg Arnold
Journalism Students

Considering the recent gambling revelations here at Bryant College, we decided to look at the problem from a different perspective. The fact that gambling takes place isn't the only issue; for it seems gambling is commonplace at most colleges and universities across the country. Since the discovery of the "Bryant-URI gambling ring," the focus has been on who and how, but not on why.

Why do college students get involved in gambling? Is it our culture, is it the fantasy, the money, or a combination of all these factors?

According to Bill Phillips, Director of Counseling here at Bryant, it is indeed a combination of these factors. In a recent article in the Providence Journal-Bulletin, Phillips stated, "For a lot of kids, gambling is a fantasy. They feel they have the opportunity to make the big score."

In a personal interview he added, "Our culture plays a large roll in the current college gambling dilemma." Phillips continued, "This generation has been exposed to the lottery from a very young age; they have been taught gambling is okay."

Gambling has become fun, and why shouldn't it be? Millions of people gamble everyday, playing scratch tickets and state lotteries which are perfectly legal. Students are being sent a mixed signal, it's okay to gamble with the state, but don't gamble at your school.

After interviewing an admitted gambler here on campus, who chose to remain anonymous, we found that Phillips words seem to be right on target. We first asked if he thought gambling was wrong. He stated, "It's not that bad when you think about it. People gamble in Atlantic City and play the lottery everyday; it's almost the same thing."

Later we asked him why he got involved, he said, "It seemed like an easy way to make money. Once I got wrapped up in it, it was like a high. I felt like I could win big everyday."

This thought seems to be common among many gamblers. However, the result in most cases is big losses. Recent news reports allege that over the past six months hundreds of thousands of dollars changed hands at Bryant and URI alone. This raises another question; what causes the gambler to continue betting after losing?

Our source explained, "It didn't seem like it was real money because it didn't change hands until the end of the week... But once I got in, I didn't care if I won or lost, I just wanted to gamble. I was in my own little world."

Another student said, "It's like a high, watching a game and knowing that you could win big money. It's exciting."

The gambling problem here at Bryant has been shut down for now, but if someone started a gambling ring before, it could happen again.

Like many other things, gambling may be impossible to eliminate outright. Elimination may not be the answer, but trying to understand why individuals get involved is. If we can eliminate the demand for gambling, what need is there for a supply?

Tuition Increase: Bryant Catches Up With Competition

last time inflation increased more than college costs was during the 1980-1981 academic year. Inflation was approximately 13.6 percent that year, while college costs only increased by 10 percent.

The annual report by the College Board of Manhattan attributed many increases to so-called "designer-demands," such as personal telephones in dormitories and Nautilus centers. Growing college expenses, for such items as scholarships, library equipment, computer equipment, and faculty recruitment were also credited for the cost increases.

benefits recently added to the campus.

Educational changes, such as the overhaul of the business curriculum, the addition of language, humanities and honors courses, and the creation of the liberal arts program, have required the need for cost increases.

Athletics is also an enhancement, having seen the addition of the Nautilus Center, the addition of Men's and Women's Rugby teams, and an increase in intramural participation in recent years.

Other enhancements included the addition of additional faculty members, now up to 137, with 72-statements, the "Trustees...have adopted the policy of transferring each year...to Funds Functioning as Endowment an amount not to exceed the sum of...endowment income plus 2 1/2 percent of all other...revenues."

This last transfer essentially takes funds from the current year's revenues and allocates it to the College's Endowment fund.

"The purpose of such transfers is to create a fund which could be utilized in the event that revenues were insufficient to meet current operating expenditures," continues note four of the financial statements.

What Competition is Doing

The current increase to $11,653 per year for tuition places Bryant just under the cost of its main competitors. The single six-percent increase will bring Bryant in line with fellow business specialty school Bentley College.

With the current economic times, many of Bryant's competitors have significantly cut back on their tuition increases.

According to reports by the New England Board of Higher Education, many of Bryant's competitors initially announced tuition increases in the spring of 1991 ranging from 8.9-percent to 10.5-percent.

However, after considering enrollment and other tuition figures, many of the institutions revised their costs, dropping them significantly. Rival Bentley College led the way by revising their initial 9.0-percent increase to a more modest 5.4-percent increase.

In contrast, Bryant's public competition have seen significant cost increases due to budget problems at the state level. All of these institutions have had double-digit-percent cost increases over last year's costs for both in-state and out-of-state students.

According to reports by the New England Board of Higher Education, the University of Rhode Island has led the way with a 20.1-percent increase on average tuition, up from an original 5.9-percent estimate.

to public institutions since 1987.

One noted change in Bryant's strategy to combat the concern that high costs are "scaring" incoming freshmen away is the change in room costs.

Halls 14 and 15 will see only a one-percent increase next year, as opposed to a 10-percent increase for those in the dormitory village and a 4.5-percent increase in hall 16 and the townhouses.

Conclusions

Bryant may still be a "best buy" according to some institutions. However, the difference between Bryant and many of its competitors is becoming closer. Bryant has definitely caught up with the competition.

The primary role in maintaining Bryant's progress as a institution is dependent upon the ability to combat the declining enrollment at the College.

A combination of careful financial planning, such as the meager one-percent increase in room costs for incoming freshmen, and added attention to marketing and publicity for the college will be necessary to increase admissions opportunities and hopefully, increase enrollment sufficiently.

A secondary role ought to be improving the athletics teams that represent Bryant in competition in the NCAA. Our basketball team is a shining example of this. With some help from the school, we could have a basketball program that makes the Bryant community want to go to games. The same can be said for other programs.

Editor's Note: This article presents the facts to the Bryant Community. Being business students, business faculty, and business administrators enables us to have some insight into the reasoning behind certain decisions. It is our hope that everyone analyzes and interprets these facts and comes to their own conclusions.

What Bryant Has Done

In the past six years, we have had tuition increases, but the percent of the increases has gone down. After peaking with an 18.8-percent increase in 1987, tuition increases have slowly declined a few percentage points each year, through last year's 11.1-percent increase.

The last tuition increase under 10-percent was in 1986, with a 9.8-percent increase.

Room and board charges have maintained a more constant increase over the years. Since 1987, the average room and board increases have ranged between last year's 7.3-percent and a 9.4-percent increase in 1989.

However, these increases have outpaced the increase in inflation, by as much as 5.2-percent in some years.

Reasons for Cost Increases

The increases at Bryant have been attributed directly to the so-called "designer-demands" and quality enhancements of the college.

The administration has long cited many enhancements of the college over the last six years to justify rate increases.

The administration cited the technological transformation of the Koffler Center into a computer center with over 150 personal computers and 40 computer terminals.

The addition of 60 personal computers and 60 terminals to classrooms in the Unistructure was also mentioned as a technological enhancement.

Buildings, they stated, have also created an enhanced campus. The Bryant Center, completed in 1986, was viewed as a major improvement to the campus. The addition of Dorm 15 (1985), Dorm 16 (1989), and the new townhouses (1990) are also percent holding doctorate degrees, the increase in institutional financial aid, additional resources in the library, and movement towards AACSB accreditation.

Where the Money Goes

For the 1991 fiscal year, Bryant earned $50,711,905 of current fund revenues. Tuition accounted for 66.7-percent of the annual revenues, a 10.25-percent increase in tuition from 1990.

Bryant also earned approximately 8.5-percent more in sales of auxiliary enterprises during fiscal 1991.

Out of the $50-million in revenue, Bryant had expenses of $41,973,141. These expenses included a 15-percent increase in spending for instruction and teaching and a 10.7-percent increase in direct student aid. However, there was only a 0.34-percent increase in spending on student services.

From the remaining $8,738,764, 99.99-percent, or all except $978, was transferred to three other funds for special uses.

The payment for debt, bonds issued throughout the past 23 years for the construction of most of the campus' buildings, made up the bulk of these transfers. A total of $4,413,410 was transferred out to pay the interest and principal on these bonds.

A special "Fund for Renewals and Replacements" received $1,326,000 of the transfer. This fund is used for refurbishing and maintaining campus buildings. As of August 31, 1991, this fund had a balance remaining of $11,784,632. A total of $318,744 was spent out of the fund in fiscal 1991.

The third transfer, of $2,998,376, was to the "Fund acting as an endowment." According to note four of Bryant's financial

O'Brien Guilty in Hatch Death Pleads No Contest to All Charges

Michael J. Boyd

Former Smithfield resident Edward O'Brien pleaded no contest Monday in connection with the April 1990 death of Bryant student Kristen Hatch.

O'Brien changed his plea in Superior Court in Providence from innocent to guilty on the counts of driving while intoxicated, driving to endanger, death resulting, and leaving the scene of an accident, death resulting. The charges can bring a sentence of 15 to 25 years.

"No matter what happens to Mr. O'Brien," stated Joan Hatch, Kristen's mother, of the potential sentence, "it's not going to bring my daughter back."

Kristen's parents, David and Joan, were in attendance for the guilty plea. Her father, David, reportedly held Kristen's Delta Zeta sorority portrait, taken just two weeks prior to her death, throughout the proceedings.

On April 16, 1990, Kristen Hatch, a 20-year old, junior, marketing major from Mansfield, Massachusetts, was jogging south along George Washington Highway, commonly known as Route 116, at approximately 9:15 p.m. She was struck and killed by a car allegedly driven by O'Brien.

O'Brien had been reportedly drinking at Parente's Family Restaurant earlier that evening. In October 1991, a $1-million verdict was awarded to the Hatch family by a civil suit against the restaurant for its contribution to the accident. O'Brien was also found guilty in the civil suit and ordered to pay $100,000 in damages.

The suit maintained O'Brien, former owner of Parente's and well known by its employees, was "visibly intoxicated" when he entered Parente's after allegedly drinking at another nearby restaurant. The suits asserted the employees served alcohol to O'Brien despite his intoxicated condition and with "conscious disregard" for others, including Kristen Hatch.

O'Brien drove home from the accident and called the 911 emergency number to report a jogger had been hit. Police traced O'Brien through his phone call to 911.

After inspecting damage to his car, including a broken windshield and front-end damage, police took O'Brien into custody around 10 p.m.

In custody, two measurements by the Smithfield Police Department indicated a blood-alcohol level of 0.22 and 0.23, twice the Rhode Island legal limit of 0.10 for driving-while-intoxicated.

Police found Hatch's body at 10:15 p.m. off of Route 116. The only form of identification on the body was a set of keys. The numbers on the keys were used to initially identify Hatch as a Bryant student.

On June 22, 1990, O'Brien was indicted for felony charges of driving-while-intoxicated, driving to endanger, death resulting, and leaving the scene of an accident, death resulting. He pleaded innocent and was released on a personal recognizance.

On August 10, 1990 O'Brien was stopped by Smithfield Police for suspicion of DWI after he was spotted weaving across the center line on Cedar Swamp Road.

He refused to take a chemical test to determine whether he had been driving while under the influence of alcohol.

O'Brien was cited at the time for refusing a chemical test, a lane violation, and for not carrying his driver's license. He was released on a personal recognizance and ordered to surrender his driver's license, attend Alcoholics Anonymous meetings, and seek treatment at a local mental health center.

His trial related to the charges in Kristen Hatch's death was delayed seven times, from October 1990 through November 1991.

O'Brien has one prior conviction for drunk driving. He was arrested in May 1982 by North Smithfield Police, fined $200, and ordered to attend drunk-driving school.

Sentencing for O'Brien is scheduled for April 27.

Student Arrested for Making Fake IDs

Julia Arouchon
Archway Staff Writer

University of Rhode Island Police arrested Bryant freshmen, Brian Queen, 19 of Huntington, NY on charges of producing fake licenses in a dorm room on the URI campus last Tuesday. Two URI students were also involved.

Queen called the incident unfortunate stating he was only trying to help out some friends.

"This was never a business for me because I never made a cent," said Queen.

However, he would not comment on how many false licenses he has produced.

The URI newspaper, The Good 5¢ Cigar, reported that no money was found in the dorm room but, Lt. Tony Colombo said a board of an Ohio license, removeable letters, a box of 500 laminents, a polaroid camera, snapshots and three recently made licenses were seized as evidence.

The police received a tip about the production from the dorm's evening manager who said she saw the Ohio board from the open door of the room.

According to Queen, the door to the room was closed and the board was facing a wall with a chair up against it and a person was sitting in the chair.

Queen said that Security came to the room because of loud music and then asked to conduct a search upon seeing a polaroid shot on the floor. He also said he only had 100 laminents in his possession.

"I am very upset with the way URI campus police handled the situation. I spent the night in their jail and was not given a blanket," said Queen.

As of July 1991, a new law made manufacturing licenses, which was previously a misdemeanor, a felony.

Under the new law, it is a felony to photograph, photostal, duplicate or reproduce any driver's license or to issue, sell or cause to be sold a commercial driver's license or facsimile.

Punishment under the new law includes imprisonment of one year and up to five years. A person may also be fined $500 and up to $1000 and his or her license may be suspended for one year and up to five years.

Queen, arraigned on Wednesday, has a pre-trial conference scheduled for March 18.

Queen said he had no idea of the severity of the crime but he hopes to receive a fine because it is his first time in trouble with the law.

Archway Poll: Students Want Election Results Released

not the Bryant Senate's decision to withhold election information was consistent with that of area schools, other college newspapers from the southern New England region were contacted.

Brown University's Brown Daily Herald, Babson College's Babson Free Press, and Emerson College's Berkeley Beacon were the three private college papers contacted. The University of Connecticut's Daily Campus and The Good 5¢ Cigar from the University of Rhode Island were the two public college papers reached. Bentley's Vanguard, The Northeastern News, and The College Voice of Connecticut College could not be reached for comment.

All of the five schools reached, indicated that they had access to the election results of their student government elections.

Graeme Lipper, Managing Editor of The Brown Daily Herald said that his paper reports the total number of votes cast as well as the percent breakdowns for each student.

An editor at The Babson Free Press, Tom Broderick, said, "We've always had the numbers." At Babson, the actual vote counts are released to the editors who tabulate the percent breakdowns for themselves in the interest of saving time.

At Emerson College, a school known for its communication programs, Berkeley Beacon Editor Kathleen Powers indicated that their paper reports the names of the candidates who won and lost. In the event of a particularly close race, individual vote totals are also released.

When asked if the U. Conn. Daily Campus has access to student government election tabulations, Editor Beth Cooper replied, "Absolutely! We're on our student government like you wouldn't believe."

And at the University of Rhode Island, The Good 5¢ Cigar prints everything regarding the election results. The student government even provides them with an amended list for write-in votes.

According to Heather Tierney, the paper's editor said, "We've never had trouble getting the results."

In an unscientific poll conducted during dinner hours Tuesday evening, The Archway posed the question to the student body, "Should the Senate release the election results?"

After his release Wednesday, Zimmerman was on campus Friday. After his expulsion on Friday, he was observed in the Bryant Center Sunday afternoon. At that time, a letter of trespass was reportedly issued against him and he was escorted from campus.

Zimmerman, originally of Mattapoisett, MA, had been involved in the patriot battalion of the Reserve Officer's Training Corps at Providence College. According to Captain Greg Bordon, enrollment and public information officer of the ROTC program, Zimmerman was "removed from the program." In June of 1990, while still in the program, Zimmerman received an ROTC award for academic excellence and leadership.

ing for careers in business leadership.

Furthermore, a history degree is viewed as a good preparation for advanced studies in law, business, public policy, education, and history.

There are three components to the history program that students will be required to fulfill. Each student must complete an individually tailored program of instruction. There will be a minimum of eight courses in History to be completed. At least two of those courses must be at the 200-level, two at the 400-level, two in U.S. history, and two in histories other than the U.S. Finally, all students will be required to complete a senior-level capstone course—a "Seminar in Historical Inquiry."

Under the new program, all history students will be encouraged to pursue individual directed studies courses, such as internships, to make use of historical resources in the surrounding New England area.

According to Hobart, all member of the history major committee, "will be responsible for counseling and answering questions" by students interested or involved in the program. The committee members include Hobart, John Jolley, Judy Litoff, James Estey, Jay Reedy, and David Lux.

Hobart and the committee hope to attract students to the new major next fall to take advantage of the strengths and abilities of the history faculty.

Interested freshmen or sophomores should contact a member of the committee for more information.

Townhouse residents will pay $4,314 for a single room and $4,228 for a double room, which amounts to an increase of a 4.5% increase for both.

A 19-Meal Plan will cost $2,541, the 15-Meal Plan will cost $2,459, and a 9-Meal Plan will cost $2,377. The prices of all three of the meal plans have increased by 4.5%.

After the cost increases, the average price for a full-time student living in the dormitory village on the 19-meal plan will be $17,440.

"It was Baldwin's cosmopolitanism that moved me to awe," remarked Henry Louis Gates Jr. at his "Remembering Baldwin" address last Thursday in Janikies Auditorium.

Gates recalls his inspiration of reading James Baldwin's works since he was a teenager and further adds, "It was his prose that shaped my identity as a black American."

Baldwin was an American novelist, essayist, and playwright who became an important interpreter of black-white relations in the U.S. Throughout his career, he directed much of his attention and his writings to civil rights issues, and the black experience.

Baldwin, became hurt and disillusioned by the prejudices he experienced in the United States, and moved to France to continue his writing.

Some of Baldwin's most famous works include: Notes of a Native Son, Nobody Knows My Name, The Fire Next Time, and Another Country.

Aside from his personal studies of Baldwin, Gates has been recognized as the most notable scholar of African-American studies in the country. He was recruited by Harvard to rebuild its African-American studies program and to direct the W.E.B. DuBois Institute.

He has also written pop-culture essays for the New York Times and has even contributed to the production of black Broadway plays.

Gates, a controversial scholar, tours the country lecturing on African-American literature, multiculturalism, and black identity.

He has won a variety of prizes and awards for his writings, including the American Book Award in 1989 for "The Signifying Monkey," a critical work about African-American oral tradition.

He also has edited a host of black literary works and has been awarded five honorary degrees. The MacArthur Foundation awarded Gates a five-year grant in 1981.

After receiving his BA in history from Yale in 1973, Gates went on to earn his MA and PhD degrees in English language and literature from the University of Cambridge in England. Gates has taught at such renowned universities as Duke, Cornell, and Yale.

Program coordinator, Ernest Cox, said he was very pleased with the month's events and hopes next year will be equally successful.

I would like to thank the Greek Community, especially Kappa Delta and Alpha Phi who ushered at some of the events, and the sponsor's for their participation and help," Cox stated.

"Hopefully," Cox continued, "some of the events helped aid in the understanding of the African American culture."

The help of Bryant organizations made Black History Month a success.

Black History Month Celebration...A Big Success

by Earnest Cox

Bryant College's Black History Month Celebration 1992 was a big success.

Throughout the month, the total number in attendance topped 1500.

Thanks to those who attended the activities. A special thanks to the social clubs, fraternities and sororities who sent representatives to activities; especially Delta Chi and Kappa Delta Rho had the greatest number in attendance at the Bryant Forum.

As a result of the Black History Month Celebration, many in the Bryant community indicated their interest in the various activities and a desire to see more multi-cultural programming on campus.

As chair of the Black History Month Celebration, I would like to thank the members of the committee who worked hard to make this celebration possible.

The members of the committee are: Charito Abando, Patricia Kelley, Linda Laurent, Neil Livingston, Angela Singleton, Edward Tudino, Warren Washington, and Cairra Xavier.

A special thanks to the many participants in our celebration; and I would also like to thank Suzan Douglas, Alpha Phi, Pi Kappa Phi, and The Multi-Cultural Student Union for serving as ushers at various functions throughout the month.

Most importantly, I would like to thank the many sponsors who provided funds that made this celebration a reality.

It is my hope that Bryant College's Black History Month Celebration 1992 will serve as a catalyst that will open the dialogue for communications on issues of multi-culturalism.

The audience at the Gospel Jubilee

Black History Seminar Enlightens Bryant Community

by Peter Mancuso

Dr. Henry Lewis Gates Jr., a well known writer, African-American scholar, and Yale University graduate, visited Bryant last Thursday.

As Black History Month came to a close for 1992, the students of Bryant had the opportunity to become a bit more enlightened about relevant African-American history through the speech of Gates.

Dr. Gates took the time to inform us of an important writer, James Baldwin, a man which might easily be passed over within the Bryant curriculum.

After a brief introduction from B.J. Clanton, Ernest Cox, and President

Lewis Gates Jr. began his praise of James Baldwin.

Dr. Gates started off by recollecting the first time he had the privilege to meet James Baldwin.

The year was 1973. Dr. Gates was sporting a "two foot afro" when he met James in France.

Dr. Gates claimed to have been a huge admirer of the American author and considered it an honor to become acquainted with such man.

As a foreign correspondent for Time, Dr. Gates was able to inquire about James' life and career.

James Baldwin's literary career took off in the 1950's.

He was responsible for numerous pieces which gave him well deserved recognition and by 1963, Nobel Prize contender.

Baldwin is a fine example of a young African-American and an inspiration to many, including Dr. Henry Lewis Gates Jr.

It seems as if James Baldwin was comparable to another great American author, Jack Kerouac. Both authors seem to have a true love of life and every aspect which it entails.

Neither ever saw such an obstacle as a racial barriers in their lives.

This was an attribute which made James Baldwin so admirable.

Dr. Gates' fondness was clearly evident during his interesting anecdotes about James Baldwin.

His lecture was not only witty and entertaining, but

Camp Challenge

by Mark Breton

Many college students go home over the summer to have fun and be lazy. They aren't aware of the opportunity they could be investing in by attending R.O.T.C. Camp Challenge.

Camp Challenge is a military camp which allows sophomores with no military or R.O.T.C. experience to earn scholarships and compete for commissions in U.S. Army. At camp, students from throughout the country train in military and leadership skills in order to be better prepared to enter the R.O.T.C. program. Attending the camp does not however obligate the student to join the R.O.T.C.

The camp is held each year at Fort Knox, Kentucky. It runs in two six weeks cycles. Throughout the cycle students are placed in leadership positions and then evaluated on their performance. These positions range from squad leader, where they're responsible for about eight people, to company commander, where they're responsible for 160.

The training is very challenging. The students who attend Camp Challenge pack more into six weeks than most do over the entire summer. The training is geared to be educational and is not anything like "boot camp."

While training the student learns how to use an M-16 and an M-60, how to rapell, and how to accomplish basic military missions. The most important thing you can learn at camp is how to work well with others.

Toward the end of camp you're given the chance to put all your skills to work through a major military operation known as Bold Challenge. Through Bold Challenge you conduct squad size missions using all you've learned at camp. The training is tough but well worth it.

All transportation to and from Fort Knox is provided. While at camp, the students are paid a salary equivalent to an Army Sergeant. Any sophomores interested in Camp Challenge should contact CPT Parker at 232-6276.

We Gamble Everyday

Chaplain's Corner

by Rabbi Lawrence Silverman
Jewish Chaplain

We gamble with many things. But the stakes are altogether incommensurate with the imagined rewards when we gamble with our future. The problem is that people seem to be willing to do almost anything for a price, if the price is high enough.

The radio talk-shows were polling last Thursday night and Friday morning. A nationally syndicated host reminded us that nearly half (48%) of USA Today's readership sample said that they would be willing to commit murder for a million dollars.

The commentator added many people would not cheat on little things, as that would seem too mean or cheap to them. He then paraphrased what he took to be the dominant attitude, "If you're going to go for it, go for it big!"

A local talk-host asked how gambling has become so prominent in our time, so much so that we find it even encroaching upon our college campuses, with some of the attributes of heavy-duty organized crime. She and her callers were deeply troubled by the recent turn of events.

The fact is that, first, people are struck by the appearance of hypocrisy in connection with gambling in our society.

On the one hand, we are told that gambling is illegal, or even that it is wrong. On the other hand, the state itself is involved in legal gambling (legal, by definition), the proceeds from which have become absolutely necessary for the administration of state and local governments and many agencies.

Second, through the media (especially television) we have allowed ourselves to be exposed to characters, schemes, and scenarios that, under ordinary circumstances, we would never think of letting into our lives. Under the rubric of "entertainment," we experience vicariously the thought processes of people that, in our own lives, we would never want to associate with.

Through this kind of entertainment's play upon our imagination, perhaps we have become too permissive with ourselves; perhaps we have become too tolerant, too accepting of mean, destructive influences that we would be much better off if we simply said "No" to. We have to make choices, not all of which are easy.

There may be those who will ask for help and those who will be able to offer help in the days and weeks ahead.

That is already a choice and, if sincere, is life-affirming. If someone wants to "take a chance," let him or her take a chance on this: That it may not be too late to start again, to redirect one's energies and commitments to what is really important; and that what is really important in life is beyond any price.

Set Back For Break? Important Bits O' Technology

by Jennifer Banks and Erika Brown

The economy is in a state of flux, and everywhere people are reducing their spending. GM recently closed plants in Michigan, Ohio, and New York and last month reported the largest business loss in history. Many families now consider buying a home out-of-the-question. Merchants report plenty of parking spaces at local shopping malls.

But little of this bad news appears to deter many college students from enjoying what has become a fundamental Right of Passage- Spring Break! Despite the failing economy, students are still finding ways to head South for break. Even though money is tight, students stand by the old motto, "Where there is a will, there is a way!"

Categories of potential Bryant "Spring Breakers" vary from those who have both a place of destination and extra money to spend to those who have neither.

In the first category are students who are fortunate enough to get away to a far-away tropical paradise. SPB's Cancun package deal was well received on campus, with over 100 bookings.

Two students eagerly awaiting their SPB trip to Cancun are Sophomores Jim Nikolas and Joe Ragaglia. Jim plans to go jet skiing and parasailing. Joe is looking forward to deep sea fishing and golfing.

Cancun is also the destination of Jennie Lynn Rice, who is travelling with friends. "I'm providing the spending money, but the trip itself is from my parents as a combination Christmas/Birthday present," Jennie says.

Bryant students are headed to other tropical destinations as well. Christine Giunetti, a sophomore, is vacationing in Puerto Rico at the home of one of her suitmates. Even with her expenses limited to airfare, Christine says she really can't afford this trip. "But I did what I had to do," she says. "I charged it!" She adds, "I know that I'm going to pay for it all summer, but it is definitely worth it."

Senior John Cirello says, "Since I don't have any money, I'm just going to Bermuda." He will be visiting a friend who lives on the island and his parents are footing the bill since this is his last college spring break.

Then there are those hardy souls who are piling into a car for a 24-hour marathon to Florida. One group of sophomores, though, is breaking up the trip by stopping for a round or two of golf in Myrtle Beach.

In a "let's pretend" mode are a group of friends who are driving down to New Jersey for a week of plain-old "partying," but at the home of a friend.

"Sure, I'd rather go to Florida or Cancun," says Katie Guildner, "but I'm broke."

For those with neither destination nor money, Spring Break means a week at home with "the folks," catching up on homework, and maybe punching a time card or two. Sophomore Stacey Pribyson says, "Because of the poor economy, I wasn't able to make enough money for the school year, so I'm going home to work."

But there is hope for the stay-at-homers for next year's Spring Break. All they need to do is design I Survived Spring Break '92 at home! sweatshirts and tee shirts, in colors appropriate for the tan-less and set up a table in the Bryant Center. There are big bucks to be made.

With additional reports by Carmen Nuccio and Christine Tilley.

Two important technological developments have been brought to my attention recently, and I think it is my duty, as a responsible journalist, to try to write a long enough column about them that I can go back to doing more important things, such as beer tasting.

The first technological development you should know about is the people that manufacture Salem brand cigarettes have come up with a new way to get you to pay to kill yourself. This great new concept is something called "Fresh Pack Salems."

Apparently, there has been a big problem with cigarettes not being "fresh" when people purchase them. So, the Salem people have decided to put them in a special wrapper which "keeps your cigarettes fresher longer."

And it's a good thing they do, because lord only knows what would happen if we had thousands, even millions, of people running around inhaling rotten cigarette smoke.

I wasn't aware there was a big problem with "unfresh" cigarettes. Cigarettes are, and I don't mean to generalize here, disgusting.

We're talking about lighting something on fire, sticking it in your mouth, and inhaling the smoke. I don't think people who smoke are particularly worried if they have "fresh" smoke.

If this was a big concern, tobacco growers would have abandoned cigarettes a long time ago in favor of bottling the smoke directly and packaging the whole thing with a mask so one could inhale the entire contents of the bottle, and get cancer and die much faster. Come to think of it, this might be the thing for them to do because it would cut down on legal fees.

OK, you say, that is certainly one mighty fine bit o' technology that those folks at Salem have developed. But what about the other technological development I was talking about? Does it have incredible, earth shattering important implications on you, the reader?

Of course it does, you simpletons! Do you really think I'd even bother to write about this junk unless it had important implications on you? I thought that might keep you quiet.

Now, as I was about to say, the other technological development is a new method of mind control where by you can convince your boss that you should get a raise equal to approximately four times the Gross National Product of Brazil.

This technique has been used by Major League Baseball players for years, most recently by Ryne Sandberg of the Chicago Cubs.

A few days ago, Sandberg was able to convince the management of the Cubs that he should get $7 million (yes, that's six zeros) to play baseball for each of the next three years. That works out to $44,000 per game, or roughly $14,500 per hour.

Of course I immediately became interested in learning about this little used technique for obtaining raises. I thought to myself, "Self, if you could learn about this little used technique for obtaining raises the size of merchant vessels, you wouldn't have to be writing this damn column every week."

You could be on a beach, drinking beer, and getting a tan." So I did a little research, which basically involved me sitting in front of the computer and making all of this up,

Off the Cuff

Mark Plihcik
Archway Staff Writer

and this is what I came up with.

What Sandberg and his agent did was to write in teeny weenie letters on their eyelids "You Will Give Me All Of Your Money," so that every time they blinked, Cubs negotiators were exposed to this subliminal message. Sandberg also had inscribed on his teeth, "And I Want Stock Options, Too," so the overall effect was, by the end of the meeting, Sandberg was walking away with a $28,000,000 contract, a new car, a street named after him in Chicago, and a good portion of Guam.

This technique can easily be applied to everyday white collar jobs such as Vice President and Congressman. Of course, there will be a minor expense incurred in the form of having the subliminal messages put on your teeth and eyelids, but I'm offering a 50% discount to those of you who respond within the next five years.

I know a guy named Vinny who will take care of doing this for you, as long as you don't mind some pain and a bit of minor bleeding...

Early Saturday morning, the sisters and pledges of Phi Sigma Sigma offered our services by painting rooms in The Advent House at 191 Linwood Avenue in Providence, where we were greeted by Sue and Lenny, members of the staff, who offered us coffee and refreshments.

The Advent House is the first emergency shelter in Rhode Island and its purpose is to provide shelter and meals to the homeless.

Non-profit, voluntary organizations such as these don't receive the money they need to do things such as keeping the house looking its best. Therefore our help was greatly appreciated (even though many of us were complete amateurs).

Needless to say, we got the job done around 1:00 and most of us left with more paint on us than the nine rooms done.

The Advent house opened in December of 1980. When it first started, its purpose was short term emergency shelter and meals for up to ten persons a night.

After a few years of experience they realized that many of the guests found solutions to their homelessness, but they proved to be temporary and therefore a more extensive program was needed.

In May of 1984, Advent House, Inc. opened its second shelter, Emmanuel House, as a long term facility.

Emmanuel House is also in Providence, located at 169-171 Ontario Street.

Residence Life

The housing sign-up process for the 1992-93 year will begin March 16.

Basic information is outlined below; complete information packets with schedule of dates and times will be distributed the week of 3/2/92.

- March 16 through April 10: occupancy and Board Contracts available at Bursar's office and Office of Residence Life (hall 6; first floor)

- Monday, March 16 thru, March 19: $100 deposit due for students requesting a townhouse.

- Monday, March 23 thru Thursday, March 26: $100 deposit due for students to be housed in village halls and hall 16.

- Bills for the deposit will not be sent home. The deposit is a nonrefundable commitment deposit and is credited to your fall '92 bill.

- Payment is made at the Bursar's office with cash, check, VISA or MasterCard; Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. - 4:00 p.m.

- A seniority system will be in place throughout the majority of the system whereby groups with higher total SCN's will receive priority.

- The sequence of housing sign-up will be 6-person townhouse, followed by 5-person townhouses, then suite-style squatters' rights (halls 1 thru 13 and 16) and, lastly, new suite requests (halls 1-13 and 16).

A lottery will be used for groups whose total SCN's are equal.

- Townhouse sign-up/lottery will be for students whose SCN (student classification number) is 5 or 6. If you are unsure about your classification number, see the registrar's office now. Students with an SCN of 7 will be counted as a 6.

- Squatters' Rights will be in effect whereby students currently living in a village hall or hall 16 may return to their suite in September if they fill all vacancies.

Some students may not be able to return to their suite (squat); they will be contacted directly. There are no "squatters' rights" for current townhouse residents.

- Failure to pay the deposit on time or returned checks may result in student being assigned after the entire process is complete.

- A bulletin board has been set aside in the office of Residence Life (Hall 6; first floor) for residents to post notices regarding sign-up.

Groups or students looking for others to sign up with may check the board or post notices between 8:30 am and 4:00 pm Monday thru Friday.

- If you know now that you won't be returning to campus housing in the Fall, please stop by the Office of Residence Life to complete a withdrawal form. This will facilitate release of your damage account.

The Koffler Center will maintain the following hours of operation from March 1, 1992 until April 30, 1992.

Delta Chi

Pledging came to a most triumphant end last Saturday as we initiated 12 new brothers. Congratulations to George, Greg, Moe, John, Marcel, Derek, Miah, Kevin, Josh, Mike, Rob, and Keith. You guys did a great job and we're all proud of you. Congrats also to the new brothers of Phi Kappa Sig, DKE, KDR and Phi Kappa Tau. Hang in there Pi Kap and sorority pledges!

In sports, the B team was thankfully idle this week, which will give Barry time to heal his hand. The Martlets routed KDR last Thursday maintaining their undefeated record. In the meantime, we look forward to strong seasons in soccer and softball.

Tomorrow the brothers will be getting an early start to meet their flight arrangements. Safe journey to everyone and enjoy the break!

Delta Kappa Epsilon

by Robert Martin

Well the fun is over, and now I would like to introduce our new members: Jeff, Freeko, Thomas, Dan, Mark, Mama, Scott, Paul, and Dennis. The brothers would like to say congratulations guys, and to also acknowledge Tim and Jimmy for a job well done.

DKE would also like to congratulate the other new members of the Greek community. And for those still going through the process, hang in there.

In this weeks sports report, the Nor-DEKES lost a heartbreaker to SLAPSHOT 2-1 in overtime. It was a hard fought game in which the defense played the best they did all season. On the court, the A-team rolled over TKE, and the Rambling Rakes netted its second victory as Phi Kap no showed.

First we would like to congratulate our 12 proud pledges on getting their pledge pins on Monday night.

Thanks to the brothers of Sigma Phi Epsilon for helping us get the weekend off to a good start on Friday.

Saturday started way too early for us with community service at The Advent House, where the friendly director informed us that you cannot tell a recovering alcoholic not to smoke cigarettes.

Saturday night we were extremely excited to be able to congratulate our new brothers in KT. You guys definitely deserve to be wearing those colors. Don't worry, your pledge sisters only have a little over a month to go. And congratulations to all the other new brothers out there!

Since most were finished this weekend, we were able to wander all around. We started at KT, then off to SigEp's 5th floor, and then to Phi Kap and DKE to see their new brothers.

Anyway, everything this weekend was just too much for words. Have a great spring break! And Happy 22nd birthday to Duckie on the 7th and Kerry who hits 21 on the 10th.

Tip of the week: If it's meant to be, it's meant to be. Advice of the week: Get Formal Dates!! Yet another Question: Why is fog better than heat and is it always this way?

Pi Kappa Phi

by Steve Stefanik

Howdy! First of all we'd like to congratulate our new brothers on colors well earned. Congrats Mothball, Squirrel, Spock, Marbles, Rambo, Hans, and Joker.

Last weekend our alumni were up in full force and they haven't changed a bit.

Oh yeah thanks to everyone who helped out the quater-race, it was a big success.

Third place was Alpha Phi, second was Theta, and first went to Delta Zeta (we'll raise havoc soon). Quotes of the week: "It is not locked but you do have to turn it Steevo" and of course "it is a football game." See ya' and I wouldn't wanna be ya'.

The Brothers of Sigma Phi Epsilon had an excellent week. Saturday, a bunch of rare Alumni came back and sponsored a killer Fifth Floor that went till dawn.

There is no news in sports, but the Athlete of the week goes to Meathead for the fastest three legged brother.

Spring break is only a few days away! Brothers are going all over, from Jamaica to England to Nowhere, have a blast.

All this news about gambling is everywhere. Bryant is a clean innocent school, and you can bet on that.

SPB

Hi everyone, I'm really psyched up because it's almost Spring Break time!! For those of you going to Cancun with SPB, have a great time, and if you have any questions, call Sue Hayley at the SPB office, 232-6118.

After Spring Break the Spring Weekend planning committee will start it's meetings to plan for the final event of the year. So, if you want to get involved with what goes

Tau Epsilon Phi

by David Delesdernier

To start off the news, the brothers would like to thank the sisters of Theta for a great start to the weekend on Friday afternoon. Congratulations to all of the fraternities that finished this week. As for the pledges of Phi Sig, Tri Sig and Alpha Phi, Spring Break is just around the corner. Too bad you have to come back.

Well our formal is coming up real soon and there are a few of those sorry saps who still need dates.

The weekend was filled with crazy stories that will long go down in the record books. Then on Friday on the floor was chaos! All things considered, Sunday was a well needed rest.

The quote for the week comes from Scooby: "I got a community chest get out of jail free card."

Theta Phi Alpha

by Jennifer Ridley

Greetings and salutations! Well the weekend started off great at TEP, thanks guys! Just one question...who owns that toothbrush holder?? But as the night continued, most sisters seemed to mellow out and limbo got the best of them. Others were on a mission to find the rest of the table and to give Piggy a warm welcome.

A select few had a great Saturday at the bowling alley - Tina did so well she even took home a prize! Saturday night picked up a bit as new brothers started to appear. Most of us found our way to Sig Ep and an excellent time was had by all. Hey guys, who's your decorator?

Well the weekend came to an end (sort of), who says the weekend ends on Sunday? We'd like to thank Delta Zeta and KDR for a great time Monday night. Excellent idea guys, lets do it again sometime. Those who did not attend had a great time at Phi Kappa Tau, as usual.

Congratulations to all fraternities who finished pledging: Phi Kap, Delta Chi, KDR, Phi Kappa Tau, and DKE. Good luck to all sorority pledges and Delta. Hang in there!

Happy Birthday Tina! We hope you enjoyed your last days in the exciting life of a 21 year old.

On a more serious note, our hearts are with you Caine. We are sorry for your loss.

Finally, we hope everyone has an excellent break in Cancun, Montreal, Florida, Following the Dead, or wherever you may be going. Safe travelling! That's all for now folks. Lata Theta!!!

P.S. Jenna, don't think we forgot about the forest fire!

Thank you to Bruce E Babes and Sean along with Graffix for an excellent gathering on Friday with Delta Zeta and guests.

Long elections Sunday! Congratulations to our new officers: President-Jerry, V.P.-Pisci, Tres.-Brett, Secretary-Bryan, Rush Chairman-Chico, and Pledgemaster-Nacho. I would also like to congratulate our new Socius Epiprytanis-Slomba. We'll miss you Lord Duke. Our lower positions will be elected next week-good luck new guys-stepping stone.

For those of you going to Jamaica-good for you! Some of us will be making money instead of spending it, unfortunately. Hope everyone has a great time there or wherever you are taking your vacation.

Until we return: Remember your lotion and if you get confused-just let the music plaaay!!

This past weekend we had our alumni up and had a blast with all of them!! And Delta's too. Thanks to Christine for all her planning, it was well worth it.

Congratulations to all the fraternities on their new brothers. To the rest of the pledges stay strong!!!

Happy Birthday to Keri, and to Shannon and Christine over break.

Good luck Tara with Senate. We hope that everyone has a great break! The quote of the week is "It's the chemical imbalance that we're not on the road to being a genius!"

Women's Rugby

by Sandy Pelletier and Kimberly Manwaring

Hello, fellow ruggers! It was quite obvious that Comfort night held last Tuesday was successful, as well as, a lot of fun! Hopefully, our supporters from Comfort night will continue to encourage us throughout our season. Speaking of which is right around the corner, so prepare yourself for hard work and a good time.

Practice starts at 3:30 on March 16th at the swamps behind the Unistructure (this is the Monday we return from spring break). Push yourself to run during break in order to make the first week of practice as painless as possible. As a reminder, T-shirt money is one week overdue, so try to get the money to Chrissy in Dorm 12, 220's before March 6th. Have a fun and safe Spring Break—see you on the 16th! Bon Voyage!

The winning team in the Schick SuperHoops tournament.

by Michele Rendeiro

Senior Dennis McCollum for the fourth year will bring the Wildcats to Northeastern University for the Schick SuperHoops regional play.

This year's team consists of senior Mike Komorowski and sophomore Dan Murphy, making their second appearance, and senior Dan Crimmins making his first appearance at Northeastern.

The first round of the Schick SuperHoops tournament was held February 27 in the Bryant gym. The tournament drew 13 teams, although no women's teams participated this year.

Seedings were determined through a lottery for single elimination play. Each game consisted of two eight minute halves, running time.

The Cats faced their toughest rival, the Running Rebels, in their first round of play.

In an intensely physical, and highly competitive match, the Rebels were defeated 34-32. The games remaining were settled more decisively.

In round two, the Cats faced the Young Guns, and claimed victory by 18 points. In the semi-final round of games, the Cats faced the Freshmen team who played determined, even after one of their players suffered an injury. The Cats prevailed by 15, advancing to the finals.

The finals pitted the Wildcats against Dope. The halftime score was 20-12 and Dope threatened a comeback. The game concluded with a Wildcat victory by 20 points.

All participants at Bryant received complimentary Schick razors. The Wildcats received Schick travel bags, and SuperHoops t-shirts.

The regional tournament is set for Saturday, March 14, at Northeastern. Even though this date falls during Bryant's spring break, the Wildcats will still go and represent Bryant.

Anyone interested in attending the games can get directions in the Intramural office. There is no admission fee.

The finals between the top two teams at the regional level will be held at the Boston Garden before the Celtics-Nets game on Wednesday, April 1.

Racquetball Team Raids PC's Friars

by Michael LaPlante

Bryant Racquetball team members placed in seven divisions in Providence College's Friar Open tournament this past weekend at the new American Health & Fitness Club in West Warwick.

The men's captain, Jesse Albright, took fourth in the Men's A division with a loss to Kevin O'Callahan of New York.

Number two Jason Hurst was defeated in the Men's B quarterfinal by former PC player Rob Messier and teamed with Chris Guncheon to make it to the semi's of the B/C doubles.

Freshman number four player Derek Gonda fished second in Men's C, beating teammate Paul Martin in the quarters, and number seven Dan Anter took a tough loss in the Novice semi's to Neal McCarthy, a member of the R.I. Junior Team.

Men's number eight Brett Dennett, coming off of strong wins at Albany last weekend, lost two close matches that would have advanced him in the Men's D and Novice divisions.

The women's captain and number one player Bobbi-Jo Bell, ranked sixth nationally last year in Girls 18+ under, took first place in Women's C defeating PC's Julie Girard in the final and lost in the semifinals of Women's B.

Coach Denise Savoie, playing in her first singles tournament in over two years, made it to the quarterfinal in Women's Open where women's pro player Janet Grimaldi stopped her in a close match.

Denise and her doubles partner, Lynn Fonseca, also made it to the quarters in the Women's Open doubles draw.

There also is the sad story of number four Paul Martin. Paul again made it to the Men's D final, and again finished second.

Paul has now finished second in D's four of the last five local tournaments.

The Racquetball team will play next at the Northeast Collegiate Regional Championships in Albany, NY in two weeks.

Santoro's early years, for being a part of the review board.

A special thanks goes out personally from Sensei Santoro, "I would like to thank all students who ever came to the dojo, as well as instructors; especially Sifu Renaud for his expert guidance, continued support, and, most importantly, his friendship."

I would like to leave you with a quote from Sensei Santoro that applies to anyone who has ever worked diligently and faithfully to complete a specific goal, and has felt a sense of pride when that goal was accomplished.

"Sensei Dubois always told me, 'You know what you are inside your mind. Take your time.' To me, this signifies an inner peace that cannot be taught but must be achieved along the way. It incorporates all of the aims to achieve."

Congratulations to Sensei Santoro.

Your actions have made you a role model for the members of the club, and anyone else for that matter, to admire.

Women's Season Over

Angelo Corradino
Archway Sports Writer

The women's basketball season came to an end this week with the team splitting two NE-10 games.

The team played Bentley in the opening round of the NE-10 playoffs losing 83-59. Bentley controlled the first half taking a 42-20 lead into the locker room, which proved to be much for Bryant to overcome.

High scorers in the game were Jennifer Spencer with 17, Bridgett Casey 16, and Holly Grinnell 14. Spencer also had 16 rebounds.

During the game, junior Kim Ross sprained her ankle and Casey split her chin open adding to the long list of injuries the Lady Indians have suffered during the season.

Last Thursday, Bryant traveled to Springfield for their final regular season game. The game was won when Bridgett Casey threw up a 30 foot jump shot with four seconds left to win 71-70.

"There was four seconds left and I set up one last play," coach Mary Burke said. "Bridgett gets one step over half court and lets one fly. I didn't think it was going to make it but it did. It wasn't even a bank shot it was all-net."

High scorers in the game were Grinnell with 23, Casey 17, Heather Houle 11, and Spencer 10. Grinnell also had five blocked shots and went 9-12 from the field.

"The season went extremely well considering all the injuries. It seemed every time we turned around someone else got hurt," Burke said went asked about season. "We got great leadership from the seniors. When the going got tough they got going. They played really well."

Coach Burke is already looking toward next season. "We are losing four starters it will be a major rebuilding year."

"It was a little unfortunate that Kristin (Berg) and Anne (Degenhardt) got hurt. They will be coming in as freshmen again, but if they work hard over the summer they will be a big help."

The team is also doing some heavy recruiting. "Recruiting is going well. I am looking to big in another four or five players next year," Burke concluded.

Jennifer Spencer

This week's athlete of the week is Jennifer Spencer of the women's basketball team. In a play-off game against Bentley Spencer was the high scorer and high rebounder of the game with 17 and 16 respectively ending her career at Bryant. Coach Mary Burke, when asked about Spencer, said, "She was one of my team leaders and she did a great job filling in for Kelly (Jacob) when she got injured."

and should add a thrill to the season seeing multi-million dollar players not playing up to their potential. Bobby Bonilla signed with the Mets for $5.8 million and Danny Tartabull went to the Yankees for $5.1 million. Frank Viola left New York For Boston, to the tune of $4.6 million. A bomb was dropped earlier this week when Ryne Sandberg signed with the Chicago Cubs for $28 million for four years. That's seven million a year, and get this he is actually grateful for it. Strange isn't it. Will they help their respected teams? Yes. But, will it be enough?

Women's Basketball Player Breaks 1,000 Point Barrier

Katie Petig
Archway Sports Writer

Heather Houle became the newest member of Bryant's elite women's basketball 1,000 point club on February 25, with 16 points against Merrimack.

The night Heather became Bryant's newest club member was special for several reasons. She not only reached 1,000 points but it was also senior night and her last home game.

Heather said there was no pressure because of the special night, but it did make the moment more exciting.

In a previous interview with The Archway coach Mary Burke said, "It's so fitting that Heather got her 1,000 point on senior night. She has been a team leader all year and has kept the team together."

"It was actually never a goal for me," said Houle. Heather never considered it since she was under 900 points in high school.

Houle was not really interested in basketball when she was younger; she studied gymnastics.

She started playing basketball in the seventh grade when her friends talked her into trying out for the team, and she has stayed with it ever since.

Heather feels the girls have all done really well this season. "We had a new team philosophy and many things added to this season's success."

Heather Houle(32) gets a congratulatory hug from her father while holding her prized ball.

Considering the things against them, having a new coach, overcoming many injuries, and finished with only five girls on the bench, Houle stated, "We had a great season."

Heather finished her final season at Bryant with a great accomplishment of reaching 1,000 points.

Her performance should be looked upon as an example for her fellow teammates to follow.

Sensei Earns Black Belt

by Patrick Doherty

On February 4, 1992 Paul Santoro, a Bryant College Alumni, achieved the rank of Shodan, first degree black belt.

Sensei Santoro entered Bryant College and the Karate Club in 1984.

As a freshman, Mr. Santoro pledged to himself that one day, he would reach the rank of Shodan. Eight years later, he has achieved the goal he set for himself.

Throughout his undergraduate career at Bryant, Paul attended karate on a daily basis.

However, after four years of undergraduate studies, he graduated from Bryant and left the Karate Club as a brown belt.

Little did anyone know that he would return to the club for four more years of training.

According to Sifu Ronald Renaud, the club's chief instructor, "We credit him with having juggled a job and personal life, and come back for four more years to complete his requirements for black belt."

The Karate Club was started in 1977 by Sifu Renaud. He has seen thousands of students walk through the dojo doors hoping to earn their black belt.

However, Mr. Santoro is only, the 19th student to be awarded the rank of Shodan in the club's history.

Finally reaching this rank means that Sensei Santoro has mastered the basics and is now ready to start giving his knowledge back to the club as an instructor.

In the words of Sifu Renaud, "I am extremely proud to confer the rank of Shodan to Sensei Santoro because his teaching skills are of the highest caliber."

Within the club, there are four aims to achieve: Modesty, Self-Control, Abdominal Spirit, and Perseverance.

Sensei Santoro embodies the entire spectrum of the word perseverance.

He set his goal eight years ago to become a black belt.

Even though he did not reach that goal upon graduation in 1988, his will and desire were so strong that he stayed with the club.

According to Sensei Santoro, "the martial arts are a way of life symbolized by achieving my black belt. It holds the same importance as other major accomplishments in my life like graduation from Bryant."

Perseverance, by definition, is a steady persistence in a course of action. Sensei Santoro has progressed above and beyond these guidelines in the pursuit of his black belt.

On a closing note, the club would like to thank Sensei Matt Shoenberg, class of '89, for driving up from New York to be a part of the review board for Mr. Santoro's test.

We would also like to thank Sensei Anthony Mastroianni, class of '82 and an instructor during Mr.

Men's Soccer Shine At Indoor Tourney

Angelo Corradino
Archway Sports Writer

The men's soccer team finished second at the University of Connecticut indoor soccer tournament last weekend.

The tournament consisted of 16 teams, including Division I schools, grouped in four different brackets.

In the opening round, Bryant was in the same bracket as the host, UCONN, URI, and Fairfield. The Indians came out on top by tying UCONN and URI 1-1, and defeating Fairfield 4-0. They then advanced to the second round.

In round two, they tied Yale 0-0, defeated Sacred Heart 2-0, and St. Peter's 1-0 advancing them to the championship game against Long Island University.

"We dominated play," coach Len Mercurio said about the Yale game.

"Last year they made it to the quarter-finals in the Division I NCAA Post-Season Tournament. It came down to great goal tending by both goalies that kept the game scoreless."

Bryant lead most of the way in the championship game, but with two minutes left, LIU scored to send the game into overtime. In the second overtime period, the tournament MVP scored the winning goal for LIU.

"They [LIU] were a superb team. They dominated in all the games they played," Mercurio said. "It was a great feeling just to come that close to beating them."

"Bryant College shocked all, particularly in a convincing manner. No game was won by luck; every game was earned."

The crowd also helped Bryant to keep on rolling. "It was very memorable, in the finals everyone started to chant 'Here we go Bryant, here we go!'," Mercurio added. "If you had a dream prior to this game, it couldn't have gone that far."

"I'm very happy for the players, the school and myself. They played terrific."

Individuals also played well. Mike Masson, Jason Cross, and Matt Liepins all had two goals a piece. Also, Liepins and Guyton Jerome were selected to the all-star team.

The Boys of Summer Ready to Return

From the final out in the World Series in October, every baseball fan looks toward the next season. How will their favorite team do? The time has come, once again, to start thinking about baseball. Spring Training has started, and the season is just around the corner.

On Deck

Angelo Corradino
Archway Sports Writer

What the this season be like no one knows. One thing that can be guaranteed is it will be exciting!

Don't get me wrong, there isn't much that can top last season. At the start of last season, if you told me the Minnesota Twins and the Atlanta Braves would be in the World Series, I would have said, "You're crazy!" But, that's exactly what happened.

Can they do a repeat performance this year? I don't think so; the magic has run out. It will be different.

There are many questions facing this season. Will the Mets go all the way? Will the A's come back from the dead? Will Yankee first round draft pick, Brian Taylor, earn his pinstripes? Will that team in Boston finally win a world series? Its been, how many, 74 years? No one really knows the answers to these questions, but we all have the same response: we will just have to wait and see.

Lets start with the American League. In the East, it will be a two, maybe three, horse race between the Toronto Blue Jays, that team in Boston, and (if they can get solid pitching from their starters) the New York Yankees.

I'm not just saying the Yankees are contenders because they're my favorite team, but because they have a decent team this year. If their pitching comes around they'll win a few here and there.

In October the only team left will be Toronto. The Yankees don't have enough depth in the pitching staff to compensate for their numerous injuries, and Boston will fold under the pressure as usual.

In the West, there is really only one team, the Chicago

White Sox. With Frank Thomas, Robin Ventura, the return of Bo Jackson, and the acquisition of Steve Sax they are contenders and will give the Oakland A's a good race but, will come out on top.

Even though I hate to say it, I have to go with the New York Mets in the National League East. They look too good on paper. With Bobby Bonilla, Eddie Murray, and Bret Saberhagen joining the club, you can't overlook them. The Pittsburgh Pirates might have a shot, but Barry Bonds is only one man.

In the West, the most probable team is the Cincinnati Reds. With pitchers like Jose Rijo, Rob Dibble, and Tim Lincecum, they are a power to be dealt with seriously.

Even though everybody would like to see it again there will be no tomahawk choppin' in the World Series this year. The Atlanta Braves can't keep it up, but they will give Cincinnati a run for their money.

Toronto and Chicago should meet in the American League Championship Series. But, the Blue Jays will prove to be too much for Chicago to handle.

New York and Cincinnati will play each other in the NLCS, and it will be an exciting series but the Mets should prevail.

We now have Toronto and New York left in the World Series. Who will win? We'll just have to wait until October for that one.

This season will bring excitement back in to the game. Nolan Ryan will have another spectacular season and we always have Roger Clemens for some sort of controversy.

Off-season dealings were wild
